Faith Based Organizations

Since the dawn of time, faithful followers have relied on faith-based organizations for food, clothing, shelter and financial aid. Due to current economic conditions, these community pillars are facing an unprecedented number of followers who have fallen on hard economic times and are relying on leadership of their faith to stand in the gap or be the bridge that carries them over troubled waters.

It has been said that it is better to teach a man how to fish than it is to give him the fish. Fortunately, many faith-based followers learned how to fish, but were using tools that were would not get the job done. They were told that the way to prosperity went through the doors of homeownership, the stock market and credit. In short, they were told to go into debt to buy the house, gamble in the stock market through their 401(k)s, IRAs ,etc and go in to more debt in order to gain a higher credit score. This strategy may work well for High Net Worth Individuals who can weather the financial storms that are sure to come, however it has proven to be an unwise and unprofitable strategy for the vast majority of the faithful few.

At Plancorr Wealth Management, our seminars and workshops do not teach attendees how to become rich or wealthy, but we can teach them how to become financially independent by implementing our “Fast Track to Success” system. For faith based institutions, this system has been manna from heaven.
